Favorite series

So hard to choose just one! I kind of want to say Orange is the new black, because it was groundbreaking to see those kinds of stories and those kind of women at the front row when it started – and it made me feel a lot of feelings. But I also must mention My Mad Fat Diary, that was such a great television show. It tackled on obesity, mental disorder and self-acceptance through the point of view of a 16 years old girl and if you never heard about it you should find a way to watch it. It is so raw and honest and heartwarming (but it will also break your heart sometimes, I'm warning you).

The last series you binge-watched

I just finished season 2 of The End of the Fing World. I loved the 1st season, it was awkward and charming in a way British shows know how to be. I also started to binge-watch Santa Clarita Diet without any expectations and it's a lot of fun. So absurd and horrific, I would not recommend you to watch it while eating. Just a friendly advice.

The next series you planned to watch

I must catch up with the season 3 of Les Grands, a French series that has done a great job capturing the essence of being a teenager. We don't have a lot of tv shows about high school in France and this one is great! Also, in another genre, I think I'll try The Morning Show. I heard it's a good portrayal of the post #MeToo era so I'm curious about it.

A character of a series you could embody

Elena Alvarez, from One Day at a Time. She's a young activist, very passionate about feminism and social justice. She has a quirky side and always stand up for herself and the ones she loves. I love that about her!
